President’s Message

The February show and sale is upon us. This one day event is so fun! Winter growers are front and center. Are your plants ready? Jerry Garner did an excellent workshop on preparing your plants. To recap, select your favorite plants that are telling you they are ready to be shown off, then inspect them for any pesky mealy, spiders etc. and eradicate the pests. Next, clean your plants, water them a week out if needed and touch up your top dressing. This is our chance to show off to our community and cactus/succulent followers.

On another note as we are starting the new year keep an eye open for conservation opportunities and what you can do. If you are inspired we need board members and have openings. If you prefer to work independently, or with a small group, bring us your idea and we will support it in any way we can. Ideas could include seeking out existing cactus conservation efforts to support with a donation or manpower, setting up a plant rescue and/or endangered species team, or possibly something larger like finding an appropriate piece of property to put into a conservation easement or trust. See you at the show and sale!

-Jim and Mary Reiser

BOOK REPORT: ECHINOCEREUS BY DUKE BENADOM

I'm not much of a traveler, preferring to stay home and make pots. On our last annual camping trip to the Sierras, my wife and I made a side trip to the White Mountains to see the Bristlecone Pines. Thanks to Denise for the recommendation! Being a cactus geek, I always try to spot individuals as we cruise along. With a quick pullout on the shoulder, I found a beautiful Echinocereus engelmannii population. Really long spines, some white and others dark. I don't do much field work, but there's really something about seeing plants in their native habitat. All this to say the Echinocereus bug has been contracted. Casting about for books on the subject, I'm brought back to Mr. Benadom's book. It's pretty easy to be critical of his choices of photography. Personally, I expect a higher standard of focus. The black backgrounds wouldn't be my call, although the mostly white spines certainly do stand out. Those objections out of the way, the genus is covered in about 60 species with 500 pages in a large format book. I like that. Needs range maps though.

The genus Echinocereus is a great one to keep in our collections. I have found them to be more idiot-proof than, say mammillarias. Depending of course on the quality of the idiot. They definitely have more spectacular blooms than most cacti without hybridization. They vary from no spines at all to wicked looking armament. I find the clump format with impressive spines to make a really good display. They inspire me to make better pots.

So I'm changing my opinion of this book, moving it to the checkout case and looking for a copy for my own library.

-Don Hunt, our resident SDCSS Librarian

Tips for Preparing for the Show and Sale:

Tools of the trade

At our last meeting Jerry Garner gave a workshop on preparing for the upcoming February Show and Sale, which this editor was lucky enough to attend. Here are some tips he offered, in a nutshell. Above are some tools for cleaning and prepping your plants:

- A) A fan brush for removing dead material from between leaves.
- B) A large pair of tweezers for removing old flowers and leaves.
- C) Kebab sticks
- D) Chopsticks— helpful for holding plants in plant for planting or packing soil down around plants.
- E) Flashlight— for looking deep into the crevices of the plants.
- F) Bonsai scissors— for cutting hard-reach places
- G) “Fish hook puller”- an alternative to tweezers

Make sure to put top dressing (fancy decorative gravel) on your plants and bring some with you to top off any holes that develop in transport.

To remove calcium buildup from the base of your plants apply distilled water with a spray bottle with vinegar. To remove calcium buildup on the plants themselves use distilled water and a brush.

When transporting plants you can put a square of carpet down to reduce movement of your boxes of plants.

The February show and sale is a great time for members to try bringing in their first show plants to learn how our judging process works and have fun in the process! So go wander your gardens in search of plants that are telling you they are ready for the show! I'll see you there! — Whitney Meier
